

FEBRUARY NEWSLETTER

"Safety is Our Tradition"

Message from Corporate:

Good Day All,

Greetings to everyone and welcome to February 2023. Yet another month has passed, and we are well into winter season.

I just wanted to take a moment and revisit our 2023 Q1 focus area... "Risk & Hazard Assessment" Ask yourselves... What risks are associated to my task? What is my risk tolerance compared to others? Is my risk tolerance putting myself or others at risk? Have I properly identified & assessed the hazards for my task? Does my task pose a hazard to myself or others? Have I mitigated the hazards correctly?

More often than not, these are all questions we as skilled trades people ask ourselves and our peers each day while at work. For skilled people, these questions come to us as second nature... but that is not so for the many new and young faces we are seeing in industry today. 2023 is already proving to be a busy year in store for many of our work locations and we will continue to see growing numbers of new and young workers enter the work force as the year progresses. What we do as skilled trades people sets the foundation for these new and developing individuals. The risks we take today may be the risks they take tomorrow... the hazards we overlook today may be the hazards they are affected by tomorrow. What we do today and each remaining day of Q1 already has an impact with these new and young workers. Again, as second nature, we as skilled individuals are already setting the foundation of our focus in Q2... "Mentorship and Competency".

Let's all do our part to support the many new and upcoming individuals in our industry and show them the safe, acceptable ways to execute work and become a quality tradesperson in the field they choose.

Have an enjoyable (second half) to your winter season, all the best to everyone while at work and while at home. Risks and hazards are not worth the outcome they create so whatever you may be doing... please take the time to do it safely.

Cheers,

Lorne Muise
